

Now there's longer to offer our Applied AS/A Levels

Accreditation for our Applied AS and A Levels has been extended and there's now a further opportunity to start teaching for a two-year course in September 2014 in all the subjects in which we offer these qualifications:

- Art and Design
- Business
- Health and Social Care
- ICT
- Leisure Studies
- Performing Arts
- Science
- Travel and Tourism

The A Level changes will apply too

The removal of January assessments coming into effect in the next academic year for all A Levels will impact on these Applied A Levels. From September 2013, students will only be able to sit AS and A2 Level exams in the summer. This will also affect those who started their AS courses in September 2012, for whom there will be no opportunities for AS re-sits or A2 units in January 2014.

This is the new timeline:

- January 2013 – the last opportunity to take an exam in January
- September 2013 – the last opportunity to start teaching for a two-year course with full resit opportunities
- September 2014 – the last opportunity to start teaching for a two-year course with resit opportunities for the first year only
- June 2015 – all units and certifications are available
- June 2016 – the date for the final series in which units and certification will be available, with no further re-sit opportunity.
