

Switching to OCR from AQA B

Introduction

The key content and skills to be covered by all new AS and A Level English Literature specifications mean it's straightforward to move to a different exam board.

We've developed our specifications to encourage learners' interest in and enjoyment of English literature and literary studies. The specifications motivate learners to read widely and independently. Learners will develop their knowledge of literary analysis and evaluation to engage critically and creatively with a broad range of texts. So why choose OCR's AS/A Level English Literature?

- The variety and breadth of texts on offer means that there are many opportunities for a personal, tailored approach. We have chosen both familiar and fresh topic areas for study, including American Literature and The Immigrant Experience.
- The topics are structured to underpin the knowledge and understanding needed for the next generation of thoughtful and passionate critical readers.
- We offer clear, well balanced exam papers within a flexible assessment model.
- Learners develop the essentials for related higher education courses as well as many transferable, marketable skills.
- A comprehensive range of creative, well researched resources to cover every aspect of the course, from candidate exemplars to handy set text guides.

How do I find out more?

- Visit our AS and A Level English Literature subject webpage to access the specifications, specimen assessment materials and a wide range of free support materials, from scheme of work planners to guides to delivery, lesson activities and more.
- We've structured the AS to maximise opportunities for co-teaching with the A Level, and you can find out more about co-teachability in our guide.
- Join our conversation on the OCR English Community and @ocr_english to talk about and share good practice.

Key differences

OCR AS and A Level English Literature	AQA AS and A Level English Literature B
We have created a straightforward assessment structure so you can focus on teaching the texts, rather than spending time coaching learners in how to navigate the exam. Both papers in each qualification are of similar length, format and structure .	The assessment structure differs . At A Level, Paper 2 is a longer exam in which learners need to ensure they select the right texts to write about in Sections B and C to ensure they cover the right combinations of texts across the A level as a whole – choosing the wrong combination would constitute a rubric infringement.
We offer a greater variety and breadth of text choice meaning that there are many opportunities for a personal approach tailored to learners' and teachers' interests .	Text choice is more limited in any given area. Learners focus on one genre from a choice of two in each examined component.
At A Level, we offer five topic areas for study. We have chosen both familiar and fresh topic areas, including American Literature, Dystopia and The Immigrant Experience.	At A Level, there are two topic areas for study, either Crime Writing of Political and social protest writing.
There is a choice of six Shakespeare texts for study for AS and A level.	Having chosen either tragedy or comedy as a theme, there is a choice of two Shakespeare texts for study at AS and A level.
When exploring different interpretations of texts, we don't privilege one particular critical approach .	The AQA B specification privileges an approach to include named critics and provides a critical anthology as a required text .
There is optional task choice for the NEA. There is no anthology of critical material which must be covered; instead, learners focus on exploring the literary texts in their comparative task, informed by different interpretations, so the focus remains solely on their chosen texts.	There are two tasks for the NEA. Both tasks must link to the AQA Critical Anthology .
