Zambia halts mission by MPs

By our Political Correspondent

AT LARGEST 24 hours issues a British parliamentary mission to Zambia is now in an uncertain position.

The Commonwealth Office has been informed that the mission would be cut short. This was confirmed yesterday afternoon.

Dr Enoch Nkonde, the Zambian prime minister, and Dr Andrew Wibalinzi, the minister of foreign affairs, had met the MPs last week to discuss the position.

The mission, which had been going well, is now in an uncertain position. It may be cut short.

Main reason

Before the 1970s, Zambia was a British protectorate. In 1964, Dr Nkonde was imprisoned for five years on charges of disloyalty.

During his imprisonment, he was responsible for the growth of the movement for independence.

The mission, which had been going well, is now in an uncertain position. It may be cut short.

Yard suspects Blake used two-way radio

By PETER DEELAY

Malvern, 20 October

The Yard detectives who led the investigation into the murder of George Blake were carrying out their own investigation into the murder of George Blake. They believe that he may have been communiquing with someone on the run by a two-way radio.

All work stopped in the prime radio workshop last week after police seized the two-way radio from the suspects. The Yard has been asked to examine the radio.

The Yard detectives believe that the two-way radio was used to cover up the fact that Blake had been involved in a car crash on 15 October 1972. They believe that the radio was used to cover up the fact that Blake had been involved in a car crash on 15 October 1972.
