Mark Scheme for June 2017

OCR (Oxford Cambridge and RSA) is a leading UK awarding body, providing a wide range of qualifications to meet the needs of candidates of all ages and abilities. OCR qualifications include AS/A Levels, Diplomas, GCSEs, Cambridge Nationals, Cambridge Technicals, Functional Skills, Key Skills, Entry Level qualifications, NVQs and vocational qualifications in areas such as IT, business, languages, teaching/training, administration and secretarial skills.

It is also responsible for developing new specifications to meet national requirements and the needs of students and teachers. OCR is a not-for-profit organisation; any surplus made is invested back into the establishment to help towards the development of qualifications and support, which keep pace with the changing needs of today's society.

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and students, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which marks were awarded by examiners. It does not indicate the details of the discussions which took place at an examiners' meeting before marking commenced.

All examiners are instructed that alternative correct answers and unexpected approaches in candidates' scripts must be given marks that fairly reflect the relevant knowledge and skills demonstrated.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the published question papers and the report on the examination.

OCR will not enter into any discussion or correspondence in connection with this mark scheme.

MARK SCHEME Section A

Question	Answer/Indicative content	Mark	Guidance
1*	<ul> <li>How far was Austria to blame for the problems found in Italy during the period 1815-1848?</li> <li>In arguing that Austria was to blame for the problems found in Italy,</li> <li>Answers might consider that Austria had direct control in Venetia and Lombardy as well as family connections with the rulers of Parma, Naples, Tuscany, Piedmont-Sardinia and Modena. The Papacy regarded Austria as Europe's most important Catholic state whilst Tuscany and Naples were Austrian allies and could only alter their systems of government in consultation with her. Metternich carried out surveillance on all the Italian states and organised infiltration of revolutionary movements.</li> <li>Answers might consider the desire of Austria to keep Italy relatively weak at the Congress of Vienna.</li> <li>Answers might consider the dislike of Austrian influence felt by the Carbonari when considering the Sicilian Revolution of 1820 and the role of Metternich at the Troppau Congress in 1820 and the Austrian occupation of Naples in 1821. Similarly, they might consider the Austrian contribution to the crushing of the revolts of 1831.</li> <li>Answers might consider the Austrian response to the election of Pius IX in 1846.</li> <li>In arguing Austria was not to blame for Italy's problems,</li> <li>Answers might consider the conservatism of most Italian rulers during this period and the backward</li> </ul>	30	<ul> <li>No set answer is expected.</li> <li>At level 5 there will be judgement as to the relative degree of blame.</li> <li>At higher levels answers might establish criteria against which to judge blame for the problems.</li> <li>To be valid, judgements must be supported by relevant and accurate material. If not, they are assertions.</li> <li>Knowledge must not be credited in isolation; it should only be credited where it is used as the basis for analysis and evaluation, in line with descriptions in the levels mark scheme.</li> </ul>

	<ul> <li>state of the Italian economy with its dependence on subsistence farming; they might consider the problem of widespread illiteracy as well as the conservative influence of the Papacy. Answers may also consider the support Austria received for its Italian policy through most of this period from Russia and Prussia.</li> <li>Answers might consider the obstruction to reform mounted by the Zelanti and the difficulty in overcoming the geographical barriers to economic expansion.</li> <li>Answers might consider the political indifference of the Italian population in general and the lack of interest in the notion of an Italian state, buttressed by the problems posed by a multi-lingual peninsula. The reliance of liberal nationalists on secret societies necessarily hindered their cause and made coordination of activities problematic.</li> <li>Answers might consider that the revolutions of 1820/1 and 1831 had several different causes beyond a resentment of Austria and focus on, for example, Sicilian dislike of Ferdinand I. They might also point out the defeat of these revolutions similarly featured causes beyond the actions of Charles Felix in Piedmont-Sardinia. Hardly any of the revolutions attracted peasant support and, in 1831, the French failed to intervene.</li> <li>Answers might also consider the failures of Mazzini such as his attempt to invade Savoy in 1834 as well as the differences between him and the Riformisti. Similarly, answers might examine the shortcomings of Charles Albert of Piedmont-Cardinia end Piez IV</li> </ul> 1834 as well as the differences between him and the Riformisti . Similarly, answers might examine

Triple Alliance which bound Italy to Austria, the very power from whom she sought the irredentist lands.
<ul> <li>Answers might consider the failure to acquire a colonial empire and the humiliation of the defeat at Adowa in 1896.</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Answers might consider that the army was kept so large because of the persistent danger of rebellion and the need for frequent recourse to martial law.</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Answers might consider the failure to develop the economy, the lack of industrial resources and the failure of the tariff war with France.</li> </ul>
• Answers might consider the aggravation of the North/South divide. Consideration might be given here to the effects of the treatment of the briganti , <ul> <li>the domination of the latifundia in the South as well as the problems of illiteracy and emigration.</li> <li>Answers might consider the failure to heal the</li> </ul> rupture with the Catholic Church and the refusal of the Vatican to countenance Catholic involvement in the politics of the Kingdom.

3	Mark Scheme Section B Read the interpretation and then answer the question that follows: 'Between 1789 and 1848 nationalism never affected	20	<ul> <li>No set answer is expected.</li> <li>Candidates must use their knowledge and understanding of the historical context and the wider historical debate surrounding the issue to</li> </ul>

Evaluate the strengths and limitations of this interpretation of the failure of the revolutions of 1848 in Italy, making reference to other interpretations you have studied.</li> <li>The historical debate centres around the extent to which it can be argued the revolutions of 1848 failed in Italy due to their lack of popular support.</li> <li>In analysing and evaluating the strengths and limitations of the interpretation, answers might consider the several reasons which have been put forward for the failure of revolution in Italy in 1848/9.</li> <li>In analysing and evaluating the strengths of the given interpretation, answers might use knowledge and understanding:-</li> <li>that the Italian revolutions of 1848 did not arise from a popular wish for a united Italian state, inspired by the likes of Mazzini and Garibaldi, but rather from the actions and attitudes of individual Italian leaders such as Pius IX and Charles Albert of Piedmont. The former's amnesty for political prisoners, following his election in 1846, combined with his acceptance of lay participation in government as well as his suggestions of an Italian customs union were the real drivers</li> </ul>		<ul> <li>analyse and evaluate the given interpretation.</li> <li>Candidates must refer to at least one other interpretation.</li> <li>The quality of analysis and evaluation of the interpretation should be considered when assigning answers to a level, not the quantity of other interpretations included in the answer.</li> <li>Other interpretations considered as part of evaluation and analysis of the given interpretation do not need to be attributed to specific named historians, but they must be recognisable historical interpretations, rather than the candidate's own viewpoint.</li> <li>Answers may include more on strengths or more on limitations and there is no requirement for a 50/50 split in the evaluation. However, for level 5, there should be well-supported evaluation of both, in line with levels descriptors.</li> <li>Candidates are not required to construct their own interpretation.</li> </ul> behind an urge for change rather than an appeal from the masses; similarly, the granting of a

			constitution in Piedmont by Charles Albert as 1			well as his approval for war against Austria in support of Lombardy and Venetia could be seen as some of the most important steps towards revolution. The facts, however, that Pius IX could not bring himself to lead a struggle against Catholic Austria and fled to Naples and that Charles Albert feared the actions of the radicals in his own kingdom proved decisive in the defeat of the revolutions.
		•	that revolution in Italy principally arose due to the effects on Austria of events in Europe as a whole rather than on the Italian peninsula, meaning that the revolutions were defeated once Austria had recovered. This suggests that the actions of the likes of Radetzky and Schwarzenberg were more influential in overcoming revolution than any lack of support on the part of the Italian masses.
		•	that the actions of other Italian rulers in, for example, Tuscany and Naples were also decisive in the defeat of the revolutions since they refused to cooperate with Piedmont. This gives credence to the idea that nationalism was not a driving force in 1848 since a key aim of the revolutions was often a 'federal' solution which,
			in itself, emphasised how little progress had been made by nationalism.
		•	that the revolutionaries of 1848 were drawn from
		2	relatively narrow social strata ranging from the
1			professional middle classes to some liberal aristocrats; the geographical origins of these men was also usually northern. The aims of the rebels could be described as self-interested and attracted very little support indeed from the 1			peasantry whose participation in politics was
1			severely hampered by their reliance upon dialect
1			and the slow progress made by the Italian language. The reliance of Italian opposition on secret societies was typical of the narrow scope of its support.

In analysing and evaluating the limitations of the given interpretation, answers might use knowledge and understanding:- <ul> <li>that, in fact, the revolutions of 1848 were a key stage</li> </ul> in the growth of Italian nationalism which had its roots in the effects of the French Revolution and Napoleon Bonaparte upon Italy. Cultural developments in many forms of the arts had encouraged patriotic pride and a dislike of regionalism.
<ul> <li>that by the 1840s the Italian language was, in fact,</li> </ul> beginning to make headway and was an essential feature of the Risorgimento , doing much to eradicate the problems of regionalism.
Developments in literature were important in encouraging patriotism.
<ul> <li>that, rather than being in the hands of princely rulers,</li> </ul> opposition in 1848 had been encouraged by their actions and that secret societies had spread the cause of nationalism, producing martyrs whose role was important. The rapid growth of political clubs in the Papal States following the election of Pius IX might well be mentioned here, as might the 'tobacco strikes' in Milan and popular riots in Palermo in early 1848
<ul> <li>that many were inspired by the writings of Mazzini,</li> </ul> especially amongst the young. Unlike previous revolutionary societies, 'Young Italy' was not a localised movement and aimed at making alliances with similarly minded groups in other European states such as Britain and Germany.
Other interpretations that might be used in evaluation of the given interpretation are:-

	revolutions of those years marked, in fact, the beginning of a drive towards a national state rather than a defeat of it. The ultimate refusal of Pius IX to back the nationalist cause actually did much to promote nationalism by seriously undermining the attraction of a federalist solution.
	<ul> <li>Interpretations which examine the influence of the</li> </ul>

APPENDIX 1 – this contains the generic mark scheme grids

	AO1: Demonstrate, organise and communicate knowledge and understanding to analyse and evaluate the key features related to the periods studied, making substantiated judgements and exploring concepts, as relevant, of cause, consequence, change, continuity, similarity, difference and significance.
	Generic mark scheme for Section A, Questions 1 and 2: Essay [30]
Level 5 25–30 marks	<ul> <li>There is a mostly consistent focus on the question. Generally accurate and detailed knowledge and understanding is demonstrated through most of the answer and is evaluated and analysed in order to reach substantiated judgements, but these are not consistently well-developed.</li> <li>There is a well-developed line of reasoning which is clear and logically structured. The information presented is relevant and in the most part substantiated.</li> </ul>
Level 4 19–24 marks	The question is generally addressed. Generally accurate and sometimes detailed knowledge and understanding is demonstrated through most of the answer with evaluation and some analysis, and this is used appropriately to support the judgements that are made. There is a line of reasoning presented with some structure. The information presented is in the most-part relevant and supported by some evidence.
Level 3 13–18 marks	The question is partially addressed. There is demonstration of some relevant knowledge and understanding, which is evaluated and analysed in parts of the answer, but in places knowledge is imparted rather than being used. The analysis is appropriately linked to the judgements made, though the way in which it supports the judgements may not always be made explicit. The information has some relevance and is presented with limited structure. The information is supported by limited evidence.
Level 2 7–12 marks	The focus is more on the topic than the specific demands of the question. Knowledge and understanding is limited and not well used, with only limited evaluation and analysis, which is only sometimes linked appropriately to the judgements made. The information has some relevance, but is communicated in an unstructured way. The information is supported by limited evidence and the relationship to the evidence may not be clear.
Level 1 1–6 marks	The answer relates to the topic but not the specific question. The answer contains only very limited relevant knowledge which is evaluated and analysed in a very limited way. Judgements are unsupported and are not linked to analysis. Relevant knowledge is limited, generalised and poorly used; attempts at argument are no more than assertion. Information presented is basic and may be ambiguous or unstructured. The information is supported by limited evidence.
0 marks	No evidence of understanding and no demonstration of any relevant knowledge.

The evaluation may deal with either strengths or limitations in a very superficial way, or may ly address limitations or strengths.
e answer has a very limited analysis of the interpretation which may be descriptive and relate more to the topic area than the detail the interpretation. It uses very limited and generalised knowledge of the historical context and shows very limited or no derstanding of the wider historical debate, with reference to other interpretations being implicit or lacking, in order to produce a ry simplistic, asserted evaluation of the given interpretation.
