Fort St David on the east coast of India is a port where great profits can be made. As well as the rents and incomes that come from there, there is plenty of high quality cloth like calico and muslin that can be brought back to England. There is high demand in England for cotton and redwood and both are here in Fort St David in great quantities.

In London many weavers lost their jobs as a result of importing East India goods. Whole streets were left uninhabited, many of our best workers left the kingdom; some went to Holland, some to Ireland, others to Scotland. Those that remained were only employed part-time; the rest were reduced to begging for bread and were forced to be looked after by their parishes.

The wealth of the whole kingdom is greatly increased by the direct trade to and from the East Indies. The East India Company has found a way of bringing raw silk into this kingdom, cheaper than from Turkey, France, Spain and Italy. This trade pays his majesty £60 000 per year in import taxes and exports between £60-70 000 per year in lead, tin, cloth and other goods produced in England.

Extract from an essay written in the 1680s by Josiah Child, when he was Governor of the East India Company. In today’s money £60 000 would be many millions of pounds.

My husband does not grumble when he gets up at five in the morning and stands at the shipping office until after five at night, sometimes without a cup of tea, only to be told that there is only work for white crews. As for the suggestion about marrying Arabs being a scandal, I have a husband to be proud of. Maybe his face is not white, but his heart and soul are.

Source E

It is agreed that the Muslim community shall be given their own special site for the burial of Muslims in a section of the Harton Cemetery in a position to be selected by the Parks and Cemetery Committee. A vote was held and the result was 27 in favour and 7 against.
