Government promises to cut direct taxes

The Government promised today that income tax would be cut in the next budget. ‘I don’t want to take money from people. It’s better to give our citizens more control over how they spend their earnings,’ said the Prime Minister. ‘Cuts in people’s income tax will also help create more jobs.’

The Government also plans to increase indirect taxes such as VAT and duties on cigarettes, wine and beer. Drivers will have to pay more in fuel duty.

Universities told to scrap ‘safe spaces’ and promote free speech

Chris Skidmore, the universities minister, says that, in recent years, universities have agreed to create ‘safe spaces’ where students are protected from opinions that might offend them. He feels that ‘safe spaces’ are against the principle of free speech.

The universities minister has now published a new fifty-three-page guidance document. This states that speakers should not be banned from universities just because they ‘offend, shock or disturb’ students.

It is the first time in thirty years that ministers have intervened to reinforce the Education Act of 1986. This Act gave universities and colleges the responsibility to promote free speech.

Government and politics in the Republic of Alpia*

In Alpia, citizens use proportional representation to elect representatives. The largest political parties in parliament choose an executive to govern the country. A president is elected by the executive. He or she serves for one year. A successor is chosen each year.

Citizens have the right to vote in referendums on a wide range of national and local matters including constitutional issues. If citizens disagree with a decision made by their government or parliament, they may challenge it by launching a referendum. Citizens can also put their ideas forward to be decided through a national or local referendum. National referendums are held four times a year on average. Voter turnout is around 48 per cent. A referendum in 2009 led to a ban on minarets.

Twenty-five per cent of the country’s population are migrants to Alpia from different countries, including the UK. They have permission to work in Alpia but are not allowed to vote.

Alpia is not a real country.
*A minaret is a tower built next to or as part of a mosque.

A local authority election

Events of June 2019

The council elections take place in May 2020. You think that the councillor representing your area is out of touch. Few people know her name and even fewer have ever met her.

Fewer than one in every four electors voted in the last election. But many people in your area complain that the council does not do enough for them.

You decide to become a candidate in the council elections next May. You're not a member of a political party and do not wish to join one. So you decide to stand as an 'independent' candidate.

Two of your neighbours and some friends agree to support your campaign.

Update, May 2020

You are elected to the council as the new independent councillor for your area.
